About us

An oil refinery, also known as a petroleum refinery, is a facility that processes crude oil into various useful petroleum products like gasoline, diesel, and jet fuel. This process, called refining, is a key step in the oil and gas industry, breaking down crude oil into different components that are then selectively reconfigured into finished products.

Refineries are complex facilities that take crude oil and turn it into a variety of products including the fuel that powers our vehicles, to asphalt and the building blocks for many plastics used in everyday life.

Petroleum refineries convert (refine) crude oil into petroleum products for use as fuels for transportation, heating, paving roads
